

HUFFMAN-L COMPILER OPTIMIZED FOR CELL-BASED COMPUTERS OR OTHER COMPUTERS HAVING RECONFIGURABLE INSTRUCTION SETS

ABSTRACT

[0062] A method for optimizing a code sequence by tuning the representations of an instruction set based on the frequency of operations performed by the code sequence. For example, the number of bit symbols used to represent a code sequence may be reduced using the present invention.